BROOKLYN, NY [July, 2013] – Mythic Bridge, a non-profit organization committed to providing filmmaking education to underserved youth, is pleased to present Flux Fest 2013, a juried, grassroots film festival that spotlights the work of 10 up-and-coming NYC filmmakers. This marks the first edition of the festival to be presented by Mythic Bridge with an award ceremony created in partnership with networking platform, Big Vision Empty Wallet. The theme for Flux Fest will center on the passage and continuity of time with a selection of 10 short films that will be judged by a panel of experts from the filmmaking community. Flux Fest will take place at Sandbox Studios in Brooklyn at 154 Morgan Ave. on Sunday, July 28, 2013 from 6pm to Midnight, with doors opening at 6pm, screenings at 8pm, and the awards ceremony at 10pm.

In 2012, Brooklyn filmmakers and Mythic Bridge mentors Ryan Garretson and Megan Stein teamed up to begin a grassroots festival of peer-created films with Spooky Fest and Love Fest. The third in that series of festivals, Flux Fest follows in the footsteps of its predecessors in challenging a group of young filmmakers to produce cinematic works around a unique theme. The location for this year's festival will be Sandbox Studios in Brooklyn where visual design syndicate, Lumenoti, will activate the space through light-based, immersive installations and interactive experiences that will further punctuate the films' theme of time passage and continuity. The evening will also include music by Luka Son Wolf and an open bar provided by Royal Wine Corp.

Mythic Bridge (<http://MythicBridge.org>) is a non-profit organization committed to providing filmmaking education to the underserved. We strive to enhance ideas, people, and communities by cultivating the careers of artists while engaging and connecting communities. By connecting filmmakers with their communities, Mythic Bridge aims to help filmmakers identify their audience and share their unique vision.
